5. looking into the perictr, with the Secretariat beyond. It, chearing of the perictr, reflected in the pool which strethes outwards from the assembly towards the High Court. The reflecting pools adjacent to the major buildings on the capital are designed to reduce the resoal distance between them. 7 (facing page), inside the multi-storey pillared hall, or forum, that surrounds the chamber and is itself surrounded by offices and conference rooms. The galleries connecting these can be seen in the photograph. 8, the entrance to the building at the lower, cen-soor, level. 9, ramp circulation: the ramp on the left leads to the lower, cen-soor, level; that on the right to the council chamber. 10, another view inside the forum.
